Resource: Community Guide to Ypsilanti

Ypsilanti, Ypsilanti Township, August Township, Superior Township and Pittsfield Township in eastern Washtenaw County are at the center of one of the most dynamic and rapidly growing area of southeastern Michigan.

Washtenaw County is one of the most desirable locations in the metro Detroit area for not only residential lifestyles, but also for commerce.

Washtenaw County is home to several colleges and universities, including Eastern Michigan University and Ave Maria College in Ypsilanti, and the University of Michigan, Concordia College and Cleary College in Ann Arbor.

Eastern Washtenaw County also is home to major industries and corporations, and both retail, business and residential growth have been extremely strong.

The city of Ypsilanti and the eastern townships of the county have had considerable residential appeal in the past decade. Subdivisions being developed throughout the area are attracting new residents and generating ever increasing economic activity.

Superior and Ypsilanti townships have seen a large part of this growth. Ypsilanti Township has more than 3,000 single-family homes either approved or under construction, in addition to the 3,000-plus homes added to the area in the 1990s.

With the residential growth, retail expansion is following. A 160,000-square-foot shopping center opened this year on Whittaker Road south of Interstate 94 and additional business development is expected in that corridor.

Through a combination of factors, the Ypsilanti area has emerged as one of the most dynamic residential construction markets in Michigan. Low interest rates, one of the state's largest concentrations of historic homes in the city of Ypsilanti, a large stock of new housing in the township and the community's location at the intersection of two major expressways, I-94 and U.S. 23, have all contributed to a strong housing market.

Within greater Ypsilanti, homebuyers can choose from urban settings with historic structures to rural country living, from exclusive properties to lakefront properties to more affordable units. There also is a large selection of multi-family units and condominium/townhouse properties.

Major employers include:

St. Joseph Mercy Health Care - 3,700 employees.

Visteon Ypsilanti - 1,100 employees.

Visteon Rawsonville - 2,300 employees.

Eastern Michigan University - 2,000 employees.

The City of Ypsilanti is embarking on a large 35-acre redevelopment project located along the Huron River just east of downtown that is slated to bring 800 new condominiums to the heart of the city, and a $35-million project to redevelop the old city landfill is on the drawing board, and major technology facilities are coming to Superior and Ypsilanti townships. And Pittsfield continues to attract both residential and business newcomers.

In Ypsilanti Township, the Huron Street/Whittaker Road corridor has become a major magnet for business, attracting tenants to the business parks and a retail shopping area in the corridor. It is also home to the Marriott Hotel and Eagle Crest Golf and Conference Center, a major business and leisure destination.

A brief history of Ypsilanti

Ypsilanti is a small city with a remarkable history.

The city stands where two Native-American trails intersected. Here the tribes held councils, performed ceremonies and traded.

In 1809 Gabriel Godfroy, Francois Pepin and Romaine La Chambre built a trading post on a site on Huron Street, just north of Michigan Avenue.

The first community in Washtenaw County was Woodruff's Grove, founded in 1823, about a mile south of Ypsilanti. This was little more than a collection of small farms, set along the Huron River.

The community failed in 1825, when the Chicago Road was surveyed a mile to the north.

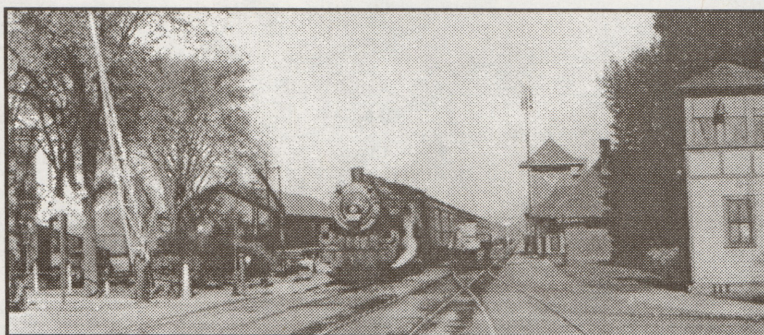

That same year, Judge Augustus Woodward, John Stewart and William Harwood purchased the land claims of the traders and began planning a new community. It was Judge Woodward who chose the name "Ypsilanti."

The city is named for the Greek patriot General Demetrios Ypsilanti, a leader in the struggle of the Greek people against Turkish tyranny.

With 300 men he held the Citadel of Argos for three days against an army of 30,000. Having exhausted his provisions, he escaped one night with his entire command, without the loss of a single man. He was called, "The George Washington of the Greek War for Independence." When the time came to name the city in 1825, the name seemed a logical choice.

Education has played a major role in the history of Ypsilanti, from its very earliest days. Mothers at Woodruff's Grove would teach Sunday School in one of the log cabins. The first brick school house at Ypsilanti was built in 1829. The Union Seminary, started in October 1849, may have been the first "graded school" in Michigan.

For many years the official motto of the city was: "Where Commerce and and the first west of the Alleghenies. Teachers' colleges were called Normal Schools because the mission of the institutions was to bring about the "normalization" of standards.

From a single building, this institution has grown into Eastern Michigan University.

The railroad also played a major role in the history of Ypsilanti, since the first train arrived on Feb. 2, 1838. A three-story depot was built in 1864, and was the finest on the Michigan Central line between Detroit and Chicago.

All the other depots along the line, including the one at Ann Arbor, were more akin to barns.

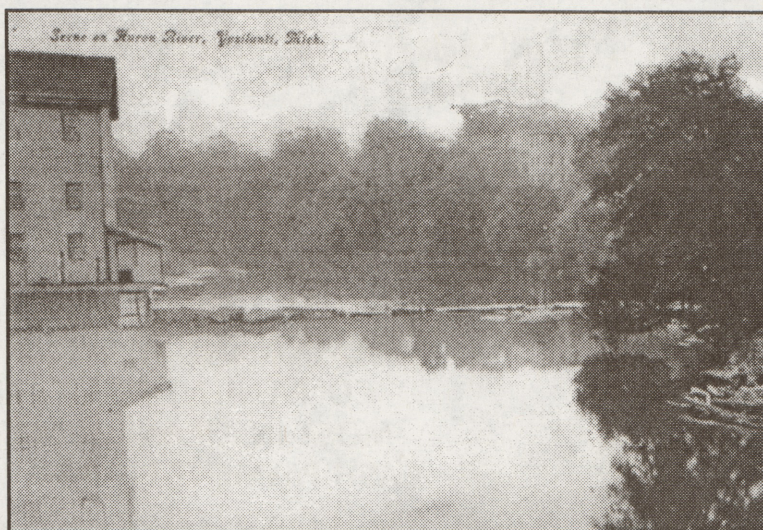

Dr. Helen McAndrew was the first woman physician in Ypsilanti. She opened her practice in 1854, and at first, it was limited to the poor of the city. As her reputation spread, it soon included the first families of the city. Dr. McAndrew carried on her practice from her octagon house on South Huron Street. The house was built for her by her husband William, a carpenter. Dr. McAndrew and her husband were active members of the Underground Railroad, the Women's Suffrage movement and the Temperance movement.

African-American inventor Elijah McCoy was the son of former slaves, and was born on a farm in Ontario, Canada. After the American Civil War, his family moved to a farm near Ypsilanti. As a young man, McCoy studied engineering in Glasgow, Scotland.

On his return to the United States, the only employment McCoy could find was Education Meet."

The Michigan Legislature established a Normal School at Ypsilanti in 1848. This was the sixth Normal school in the nation, as a fireman on the Michigan Central Railroad. At this time, trains had to make frequent stops so parts of the engine could be oiled. McCoy invented a lubricating cup in 1872, ending the need for the stops. Soon the market was flooded with cheap and inferior knock-offs. Railroad purchasing agents began asking, "Is this the real McCoy?"

At the time of his death in 1929, McCoy held 80 patents.

The 1890s were a time of change and innovation for Ypsilanti. It was in the early 1890s that the street railroad was installed. Called the "Ypsi-Ann," it linked the two cities, and was the first interurban in the state of Michigan. When the "Ypsi-Ann" first began operations in 1891, many predicted a quick end to the enterprise. What the critics had failed to the Normal. Equilibrium, it was soon noted, was achieved on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. The interurban remained in use into the 1920s, when it was displaced by the automobile.

The community was forever changed as a result of the Second World War and the opening of the bomber plant at Willow Run. Beginning in April of 1941, a huge aircraft factory rose out of the farm fields east of the city. To fill manpower needs, workers were recruited from Kentucky and Tennessee. Overnight, Ypsilanti went from a sleepy college town to a blue collar community. By the end of the war, the plant at Willow Run had produced 8,685 B-24 bombers.

B-24 Liberator bombers were built at the Willow Run Bomber Plant from 1941-44.

announcing University Bank's
Community Unity program

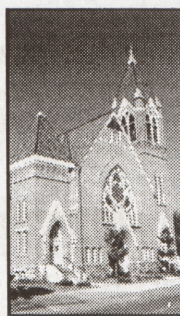

With University Bank's Community Unity program, your organization can earn money simply by doing its banking. When you open a business checking account with us, we'll contribute funds back to your non-profit organization!

We'll even go a step further – if a supporter of your organization opens a checking or money market account with us, we'll make a contribution on their behalf, too! It's our way of saluting the work you do for our community – and helping you do more of it!

For more information, contact Lisa Hudy at (734) 741-5858.

Are you offering the latest treatments?

THERE ARE TWO SIDES
 TO EACH OF US
 WHEN WE NEED CANCER CARE.

Side one wants the confidence of exceptional medical credentials and the latest treatments. If you were diagnosed with cancer, you would want to be treated at Saint Joseph Mercy Cancer Care Center, with one of only 50 programs in the country recognized as a Community Clinical Oncology Program by the National Cancer Institute.

Side two is vulnerable, and needs the reassurance of personal care. Saint Joseph Mercy has a century-old tradition of providing compassionate care that is as comforting as it is rare.

We think it's nice to have choices but it's better to have it all at Saint Joseph Mercy in Ann Arbor.
